

Lessons/Tutorials

When we have a Warrior from around the world Join our family we provide lessons via the most productive methods we have to connect with. We love to teach and we know how to present information personally, in group settings, during practices/games, via the zoom, the cell, or even the text. YEP! We can teach via text!

WE LOVE What we Do and when we find others who love it too then there are no boundaries or limits to what we can do. Please allow me to share this example. In 2020 the world shut down! Nobody could get out and play baseball, practice baseball, look at a baseball. Governments on all continents shut everything down. No fields to practice, no people to play catch with and no equipment to be taken in public or private to areas within the public or private grounds of life. HOWEVER.....WE DID!!!!

We learned how to teach players, from around the world how to hit, throw, field, and improve their strength via the power of the virtual world. We zoomed, we texted, we shared personal videos, and we talked over the phone. We learned how to explain movements, self-video, visualize, adapt. We created balls out of plastic bags and paper so we could hit them inside and outside without them destroying the house or leaving the yard! We created a global challenge of push-ups, throwing mechanics without a ball, and hitting mechanics without a pitch being throw.

We showed footwork to a young warrior I Japan. We taught hitting to Warriors in Africa. We critique the pitching mechanics of the Europeans, and we analyzed video and video of our players from the Americas.

As we all fought the enemy of negativity and despair, we found men and women who refused to be held down and we pushed forward to improve and play. We wrote books on the game, we studied our protocols with a little more enthusiasm, and we returned to the game in 2021 with new kindled power running through our veins.

We can honestly say without hesitation, that we can teach the game to anyone, anytime, and anyhow. We enjoy watching the lightbulb turn on and we love the success stories that result from our efforts.
